The Write News

THE WRITE ATTITUDE
NEWSLETTER
FOR STUDENTS
SPRING 2015/Issue 4

Brianna Sanders,
SSU student and winner of The Write Attitude Competition on Instagram

I WRITE

to inspire people and to release emotions

What about you?

The QEP & The Community
Interviews with QEP Lunch & Learn Special Guests
Student Poetry
The Write News is a means of keeping students, faculty and staff aware of important information and events related to writing, demonstrating how strong writing skills are necessary in the professions, and showcasing our SSU authors.

The Write News is an brought to you each semester.

The Write News is part of The Write Attitude, the Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP) at Savannah State University, a campus-wide initiative to enhance student learning by improving attitudes about writing.

Please share your articles, essays, poems, and other enlightening writing samples and experiences with us.

Visit us:
qep.savannahstate.edu

Contact us:
qep@savannahstate.edu

The Write News
SSU STUDENT
THE WRITE ATTITUDE NEWSLETTER
SPRING 2015/Issue 4

INSIDE THIS ISSUE

The QEP & The Community
The Henry and Beezus Project

QEP Lunch & Learn
Writing the Vision: The Essential Writing Elements of the Filmmaking Process with Miller Barger,
SSU Alumnus and Filmmaker
An Interview with Annabelle Carr,
Editor of Savannah Magazine
The Write Attitude Radio Show:
What’s “write” about that?
with Martin F. Staunton, WSAV Reporter

Critically Acclaimed Authors & Poets
International Poet Sholeh Wolpé
Enchants SSU Audience
2014-2015 Critically Acclaimed Authors & Poets’ Lectures and Readings at SSU

Student Poetry Workshop
New Ways to Bring Out the Writer in You
with Poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie
Original Student Poetry

The Write Attitude Student Photo Gallery

The Write Attitude Competition on Instagram & Other Spring Contests
Stubborn As A Mule! Essay Contest
Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc., Delta Eta Chapter
Oratorical Contest
Math & QEP Essay Contest
Paint Chip Poetry Contest

QEP: All About You
The Henry and Beezus Project

The QEP team worked to improve fourth grade students’ attitudes about writing

By Kiara Lewis, SSU English Student and QEP Intern

That is the initiative of the Quality Enhancement Plan. We developed instructional learning plans and outcomes to implement this goal. The lesson plans consisted of trivia questions, vocabulary, expository writing, and reviewing previous chapters of the story to make sure the students comprehended and retained what they learned. We also allowed the students to “popcorn read” in order to get them involved, become more confident in reading aloud, and to improve their reading skills.

We chose this book because it is a fun story that allowed the students to gain an understanding of storytelling and recognize various themes within a story. My favorite exercise was when students read a chapter with the theme of perseverance, and they had to write about a time when they had to persevere.

We provided each student with a folder they were allowed to decorate, to keep track of their progress. We would also give the students written feedback on their work, always keeping them motivated and eager to continue to write.

From beginning to end, we did see students improving, and some students had very impressive writing for fourth graders! It was sad when the project ended, because every time we showed up, their excitement reminded us just how much of a positive impact we shared in their lives.
Writing the Vision: The Essential Writing Elements of the Film-making Process

By Sierra Walton, SSU Mass Communications Student

Filmmaker, author, business consultant and Savannah State University alumnus, Miller Bargeron was a QEP Lunch & Learn series guest speaker. Bargeron shared his advice on the essentials of writing for film. More than 50 students listened intently to Bargeron as he described the process of coming up with a story that a person wants to tell. He also discussed researching, drafting and bringing the vision to life.

“Everyone is so used to seeing the final product, but there are many drafts that come before that,” Bargeron says. The different stages of drafting before you approach the final draft must be taken seriously in order to produce a masterpiece and to avoid plagiarism. Writing as a process is key.

When it comes to bringing a story to life, there is more than just grabbing a camera and shooting. It takes planning, writing, organizing, casting, and more. The most important part of bringing a story together is creating it. Whether your story is fictional or real, all stories have to seem believable by the viewer.

As director and producer of Stubborn As A Mule!, Bargeron discussed his process of bringing the film to life. Since his film is based on true events, he had to devote a majority of his time to interviewing people and researching information to add credibility to his work.

So before you say “Action!,” grab a pen and paper, create a script, perfect the story, and organize your information.

Miller Bargeron, SSU alumnus and the director of Stubborn As A Mule!, speaks about “Writing the Vision” at a QEP Lunch & Learn.

Stubborn As A Mule! is an internationally award winning documentary that presents historical facts and contemporary commentary regarding the call for reparations for African-Americans.

To watch Stubborn As A Mule!, go to www.youtube.com/watch?v=4PDt0E7tsBk

The QEP & Savannah Black Heritage Festival developed a Student Essay Contest based on Stubborn As A Mule!

Our winners: Imani McIntyre & Shayanna Bonner
An Interview with Annabelle Carr, Editor of Savannah Magazine

Sierra Walton: What do editors look for in good writers?

Annabelle Carr: You have to be a passionate reader, more than anything. I can always tell if a writer is really a writer by their ear. If they can hear when something sounds wrong, if they can hear the rhythm and can instinctively self-correct, if they can evoke something, almost invoke something, create, and catalyze a response in people... If that doesn’t happen, then they might be able to deliver good facts in a timely manner, but they’re not going to give me everything I need as a writer.

Sierra Walton: What are some skills or qualifications a person must have to be a successful editor?

Annabelle Carr: For an editor, you need those same skills [that are embodied in a good writer], but then you also may have that even higher vision of what’s going on. It’s not just about filling a certain niche within the magazine or within the publishing world, but it’s about really seeing the big picture and what else you can add to it...that ability to shift focus from high level to minutiae very quickly and precisely.

Sierra Walton: What do editors look for in good writers?

Annabelle Carr: I love sitting down and getting ideas together for a new issue. We start out with just a few ideas about what each issue’s theme is going to be, and then we get to find out what’s going on right now that ties into the theme, and we get to think visually about the magazine, as well as word-wise. Magazine editing is a lot of collaboration with art, so that’s really fun. That high-level planning period is really, really fun, and then when you get into executing it and when reality starts to try to measure up to your expectations and it can’t, that can be a little bit of a downer. And so then this other fun part comes in where you are fighting to make it as good as it can be and to get it as close to your vision as possible. You win some and lose some, but it’s a fun battle.

More about Savannah Magazine: www.savannahmagazine.com

Sierra Walton, SSU Student and QEP Communications Intern, interviews Annabelle Carr, Editor of Savannah Magazine.
The Write Attitude Radio Show: What’s “write” about that?

WSAV Reporter Martin F. Staunton shares the difference between writing for radio and TV

By Sierra Walton, SSU Mass Communications Student

In a recent interview, Martin Fitzgerald Staunton, WSAV Reporter and a QEP Lunch & Learn guest speaker explained, “There is a difference between radio and television broadcasts.” This is because these different platforms require two different ways of writing.

“Always remember when you’re talking about broadcast television or broadcasting an image, that you use words that support the pictures. In radio, your words are the pictures. You can also use sound. All of these things paint a mental image for a person when you’re listening to the radio,” Staunton explains. There are several factors that go into the process of producing a successful radio show. The script is one of the most important parts of the show. It holds the show together and adds fluidity, making it easier to transition from one part to another.

Creating a script for a radio show requires organization as well as a strong idea of sensory detail. Since none of our listeners can see what we are talking about, it is the writer’s job to use powerful imagery that will tap into their imaginations. However, for TV broadcasting, the pictures are right there in front of the viewer, making it easier for them to get a clear view of what is going on.

Jan. 2015: Poetry in the Air explored the value of poetry and several critically acclaimed poets
Feb. 2015: Poetry in the Air focused on poet Nikki Giovanni
Mar. 2015: The Writer’s Way featured author Lawrence Hill
Apr. 2015: Poetry in the Air spotlighted Estuary, SSU’s Literary Magazine

Listen to the shows at qep.savannahstate.edu/About-QEP/Radio-Shows.aspx
International Poet Sholeh Wolpé
Enchants SSU Audience

By Jocelyn Botticelli, SSU Staff member

Iranian-born and Trinidad-bred poet, editor, and literary translator, Sholeh Wolpé, graced the campus of SSU on February 5, 2015. She shared her works with students, faculty, staff and the larger community. As part of the 2014-2015 Georgia Poetry Circuit, Wolpé was invited by CLASS and the QEP to come to campus to enchant us with her award-winning poetry.

Wolpé read many of her works in the Black Box Theatre, bathed in blue and pink lighting that created an illusion of a dream. This dream captivated the audience for an entire hour, after which she graciously autographed copies of her books and took pictures with many new fans.

Wolpé is a self-proclaimed exile. On the move since the age of 13, she now lives in the United States, but longs to reconnect with her homeland once again. Until then, she expresses herself through the written word.

“Poetry is everything,” she said. Even though she has embraced various religious and philosophical backgrounds, now her religion is poetry. She explained it is her connection to all human beings. In particular, it is her mastery of imagery that keeps her readers so connected to her words.

Wolpé is a translator of international poetry and stressed how important fluency of language and writing is in order to capture the essence of what the writer is trying to convey. Translation also is a way she feels that people can connect outside of the media and on a deeper level. Her three collections of poetry: Rooftops of Tehran, The Scar Saloon, and Keeping Up with Blue Hyacinths are world-renowned and have won her various awards.

To learn more about:
Sholeh Wolpé
www.sholehwolpe.com
Georgia Poetry Circuit
www.berry.edu/gpc/
New Ways to Bring Out the Writer in You

Poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie shares her magic with Savannah State University students

By Sierra Walton, SSU Mass Communications Student

Savannah State University students were exposed to new ways of tapping into their inner writer by using their senses. Poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie led students on a journey of various exercises that required them to utilize their imagination. She was able to help students pay attention to what they were taking in by opening their eyes, inhaling with their noses and feeling with their hands and their hearts.

The students wrote down what they saw throughout the day for the first exercise. Using what they observed, they had to create a haiku poem. From there Tallie passed around an apple, pointing out that the students should look closely at the condition of the apple and its texture. The poet encouraged students to write a poem about the apple, but on one condition: they could not use the words, apple, red, fruit, temptation, or Adam and Eve. During the next exercise, she walked around, allowing students to smell an unknown scent. After smelling it, students had to write a poem based off of the smell. The last exercise was the most popular, according to the students. Tallie turned on a distinct jazz instrumental. Once she did that, she told the students to imagine a setting or a place and to create a poem based on what they imagined from the music.

It was more than a pleasure to be able to learn from Poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie; it was more of a surreal experience to be taught her magic. Her exercises made students more confident about their writing and they inevitably discovered the magic within them. From something as simple as using the senses, Tallie taught us that sometimes writing not only needs one to look, but to see, not only to smell, but to inhale, and not only to touch, but to feel; and from there one’s imagination will stretch to immeasurable distances.

From left to right: SSU students Sierra Walton, Olivia Botticelli, Jacob Evans, poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie, and SSU students Joshua Cliatt, Elizabeth Jackson, and Tom Bennet, Jr.

Our SSU students had the opportunity to participate in a poetry workshop led by poet Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie.

To learn more about Mariahadessa Ekere Tallie: www.ekeretallie.com
Sierra Walton, SSU Student

iv.

Woke up on the black ocean,
Wincing at the sun
With bleeding toes
Climbing and crawling on each note.

It is so dark
But the sun breaks
And then I am walking on the streets of Crooklyn,
Growing with each stride.
I see the police
And my brisk walk turns into a sprint
And I start running from the world.

I break into an apartment
Hurrily packed my bags
Kissed him goodbye
People waving hello or bye?
I run, I run, I run
Past the painters, bicyclers, the tourists and students.

I pull the string floom!
My wings emerge and I shoot up full blast
To the sun
Crying ashes
Feeling my smile burn into peace.

Joshua Cliatt, SSU Student

Memories of the boy

Sweet tangible joy takes over me,
Wrapping my sinful soul with your quilt of salvation,
Though a man, yet in your eyes I am infantile.
I ask you to never let me fall, but sometimes I do
And you’re there always with me forever and ever
To gather my hands, gather my arms, gather my feet and
My beating heart to put me back together
Repairing me.

Tom Bennett, SSU Student

Good Ole Granny’s House

Ooh!!
Grandma what is that?
What is what Aaron?
Sniff!! Sniff!!
That smell
Oh That
That’s my buttermilk biscuits
Grandma I smelled those from my room
It hit me like a linebacker
I felt the taste before I got out my bed
Biscuits how could you wake me up?
That’s what my legs said
But my taste buds are saying
Thank You.
THE WRITE ATTITUDE STUDENT PHOTO GALLERY

SSU Student Erica Relaford and author Karen Abbott

Author Tina Ansa and SSU Student

SSU students and Fashion Marketing Professional JJ Maxwell at a QEP Lunch & Learn

Professor Thompson and his Theatre students, after recording a piece based on The Book of Negroes, Lawrence Hill’s novel. The performance was aired on The Writer’s Way, a Write Attitude

SSU students and Dr. Ali Asani, Harvard Professor

Author Lawrence Hill and SSU Student, during a classroom discussion

SSU Graduate and Undergraduate student award winners at the 5th Annual Research Conference

The Write Attitude: Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP) @ Savannah State University
The Write Attitude Competition

1. Brianna Sanders
2. Dartanion Jones
3. Rhonda Jones

Math & QEP Essay Contest
1. Dorion Baker
2. Raven Davis
3. John Murphy

Paint Chip Poetry Contest
1. Frederick Barnes
2. Benjamin McLin

Stubborn As A Mule! Essay Contest
1. Imani McIntyre
2. Shayanna Bonner

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc., Delta Eta Chapter Oratorical Contest
1. Elijah Jones

Congratulations to our 2015 Spring Contest Winners!

1,508 Likes 1,276 Likes 603 Likes
Would you like to be part of our Write Attitude Radio Shows?

Send your name and best contact information to qep@savannahstate.edu

Participate in the QEP writing workshops, events, and competitions!
You will learn, may earn extra credit, and could win cash or other prizes!

The Write Attitude & The QEP

The Write Attitude is SSU’s Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP), a campus-wide initiative to enhance student learning by improving

Campus Writing Resources:

Asa H. Gordon Library
Career Services
Student Union, Room 115

Center for Academic Success
Whiting Hall, Room 253

Smarthinking.com

SSU Writing Center
Payne Hall, Room 201

FOLLOW US!
Follow us to get instant updates on The Write Attitude workshops, events, and contests!

qep.savannahstate.edu
facebook.com/WriteSSU
twitter.com/WriteSSU
instagram.com/write_ssu

... and CONTACT US!
qep@savannahstate.edu